However, FPIs turned net sellers in July0August and pulled out over ₹30,00 crore after the government announced a super-rich tax, which also impacted foreign funds. Besides, global cues turned un-supportive. Further, brewing tension between US and Iran, an escalating US-China trade war and fears of slowing global growth created a risk-off sentiment, which did not augur well for emerging markets like India.

Reversing their selling spree, FPIs once again turned net buyers in September and the momentum continued till November after the government announced steps to boost the economy and spur investments.

Going ahead, Umesh Mehta, head of research at Samco Securities, said there would not be any major change in the FPI behaviour in 2020 as an uncertainty will continue in developed markets, at least till the US elections are over and the trade war tensions subside.

"FPIs would continue to be watchful of the domestic environment and tread cautiously. The long- term trend would be largely guided by the government efforts getting translated into revival in domestic economy and corporate earnings. On the global front, the outcome of US-China trade war and how global economy shapes up will have an influence of the foreign flows flowing into India," Srivastava said.

IIFL Securities CEO Arindam Chanda said the new year should attract FPI investment into companies beyond the established large caps.
