Ireland are in a pickle going into the third round of Six Nations fixtures against Italy.

They have lost both of their opening games, against Wales following the dismissal of Peter O'Mahony and a narrow defeat to France last time out.

The defeats have left Ireland in the doldrums alongside this weekend's opponents Italy, and the pressure is on to turn things around.

Coach Andy Farrell knows that nothing less than a resounding victory over Italy would be acceptable, with tough matches against Scotland and England to follow.

Italy have suffered typically brutal defeats at the hands of the two pre-tournament favourites, France and England, and will hope to put on a better display against opposition in disarray.

RadioTimes.com has rounded up everything you need to know about how to watch Italy v Ireland on TV and online.

Italy v Ireland prediction

Ireland should win this one comfortably, but it's the manner of victory that will be most scrutinised by the Irish faithful.

Defeat is simply not an option for Farrell, and fans are baying for signs of progress across the field.

Johnny Sexton is back in for Ireland and he will be expected to deliver the goods on Sunday, but if Ireland are to salvage any pride from the 2021 tournament, they need more leaders to step up and grab games by the scruff of the neck.

Prediction: Ireland win
