Canelo is finally set to make his one and only appearance in the ring on Saturday night when he takes on Callum Smith in the main event from San Antonio. Alvarez, who gained free agency from both Golden Boy Promotions and streaming service DAZN in a legal battle earlier this year, will fight Smith for a pair of super middleweight titles on the streaming platform.

Smith is the WBA titleholder and his belt will be on the line, as will the vacant WBC belt after the sanctioning body leapfrogged mandatory challenger Avni Yildirim to hang the belt on the fight. The winner will need to face Yildirim in their next fight, according to the WBC. Were that situation not already confusing enough, Alvarez also is the WBA “regular” champion, which is a step below Smith’s status as “super” champion.

TV: Traditional PPV ($69.99) Stream: DAZN (sign up now for $19.99/month)

The Canelo Alvarez vs. Avni Yildirim fight card takes place on Saturday, Feb. 27 and kicks off at 20:00 local time on the US East coast, or 1am Sunday morning in the UK on Greenwich Mean Time. Main event ringwalks, as always, depend on how long the undercard runs, but the ballpark estimate is around 11pm EST/4am GMT.

Canelo vs Yildirim undercard

Julio Cesar Martinez vs McWilliams Arroyo (WBC Flyweight Title)

Zhang Zhilei vs Jerry Forrest (Heavyweight)

Diego Pacheco vs Rodolfo Gomez Jr. (Super Middleweight)

Alexis Espino vs Ashton Sykes (Super Middleweight)

Marc Castro vs Lester Brown (Junior Lightweight)

Alexis Molina vs TBA (Featherweight)

The fight is interesting in the physical differences between the two men. While Alvarez is the favorite and arguably the best pound-for-pound fighter in the world, he faces a (literal) tall task in the 6-foot-3 Smith, who will hold a considerable size advantage over the 5-foot-8 Alvarez.

Alvarez vs. Smith card, odds

Canelo Alvarez -650 vs. Callum Smith (c) +475, WBA and vacant WBC super middleweight titles

Marc Castro vs. Luis Javier Valdes, featherweight

Frank Sanchez vs. Julian Fernandez, heavyweight

Raymond Ford vs. Juan Antonio Lopez, super featherweights

Austin Williams vs. Isiah Jones, middleweight

Christian Gomez Duran vs. Angel Hernandez, welterweight

Alexis Eduardo Molina vs. Robert Greenwood, featherweight

Canelo Alvarez vs Avni Yildirim live stream: how to watch the fight from anywhere

Saul ‘Canelo’ Alvarez returns to the ring for his second bout in barely two months, with the biggest draw in boxing set to defend his Super Middleweight titles against Avni Yildirim. It’s the Mexican legend’s first fight of 2021, and you can read on as we explain how to watch a Canelo vs Yildirim live stream right now and catch all the boxing action online from anywhere in the world now.

However Alvarez must first emerge from a 12-rounder with his mandatory challenger completely unscathed. The defending WBA (Super), WBC and The Ring titlist is the heavy favourite for the encounter but anything as minor as a facial cut or a muscle strain could put a quick return for Cinco in jeopardy.

Canelo vs Yildirim time and date

The Canelo Alvarez vs Avni Yildirim fight takes place on Saturday, February 27 at Hard Rock Stadium in Miami Gardens, Florida.

The night’s main card is set to get underway at 8pm ET/5pm PT in the US and 1am GMT / 12pm AEDT / 2pm NZDT in the UK, Australia and New Zealand.

Ring walks for the main event are roughly expected to be as follows.

Canelo vs Yildirim ring walk times

Alvarez vs Yildirim time (US and Canada): 11pm ET / 8pm PT / 10pm CT

Alvarez vs Yildirim time (UK): 4am GMT (Sunday, February 28)

Alvarez vs Yildirim time (mainland Europe): 5am CET (Sunday, February 28)

Alvarez vs Yildirim time (Australia): 3pm AEDT (Sunday, February 28)

Alvarez vs Yildirim time (New Zealand): 5pm NZDT (Sunday, February 28)
