Get your hands on DaVinci Resolve 16. 0 Keygen now, before anyone else does! Release Date: 06/11/2017 Vendor: Nix Toolz A new crop of feature-rich software is coming to market at us. It's not just the standard Windows 10, MacOS 10.12 and Linux distributions either, but high-end applications built on new technologies are being released under the "DAVINCI RESOLVE" brand - which is being used for free for personal use without restrictions. These tools will perform the same function as the full-featured software but with very little of the complexity or cost involved. DAVINCI RESOLVE is a full-featured video editing suite capable of editing 4K and 8K resolution footage. Despite having no restrictions on its use, this software comes with three different subscription plans that allow users to take advantage of the latest features without spending thousands of dollars. Release Date: 08/17/2018 Vendor: Nix Toolz

As released in May 2014 (1.3) there was no support for MP4 or H.264 codecs. Also, the hotkeys were reshuffled, icons were moved around and Resolve 12 was dropped in favour of Resolve 14 Professional (see below). As released in September 2014 (1.4) there was no support for MP4, H.264 and some other codecs. Support for 64-bit systems was added at the same time, and Resolve 12 dropped in favour of Resolve 14 Professional (see below). As launched in May 2015 (1. 5) Resolve 15 dropped support for 64-bit systems (which were not supported in Resolve 14 Professional anyway), and added support for H.264, Apple Pro Res 422 (HQX) and DNxHD HLG. As launched in May 2016 (1.6) the Mac release of Resolve 15 was delayed to November 2016, MacOS Sierra 10.12 was dropped in favour of macOS High Sierra 10.13, the beginning of the transition to 32-bit via AVCHD encoding was removed, DNxHD encoding on Windows 7 or newer was rescheduled to October 2017, and AVCHD recording on new cameras was added.
