The original version of NeatVideo was developed by Andrius Batiukas, who turned to self-employment by releasing the NeatVideo plugin on the day he graduated from Vilnius University in 2008. For the first two years he kept developing the plugin, until Adobe signed him as their developer for specific video processing tasks. NeatVideo was first publicly released in May 2010. NeatVideo has been used by several of Adobe's products including Premiere Pro, After Effects, Media Encoder, Avid Media Composer or Final Cut Pro. NeatVideo has won several awards including "Best New Product of 2011" at Digital Hollywood Awards 2011, "Product of the Year" at AVWeb 2012 and "Best Custom Template Tool" at 3DVisions 2013 among others.

Andrius Batiukas started developing NeatVideo by himself in 2008.
