OBJECTIVE

My name is Gcina Ntsaluba and I am an award winning Journalist based in Johannesburg. I hold National Diploma in Journalism from the Walter Sisulu University but my dream is to study further to become a world-class Investigative Journalist. I have over 10 years of experience as a Journalist. My experience includes working for various national newspapers around South Africa which include the Mail and Guardian, City Press, The Sunday Independent as well as Corruption Watch. I am a prolific writer and researcher with a proven ability to investigate and produce high quality work. Some of my biggest achievements so far was winning the Mondi Shanduka award for Story of Year in 2010 and being a contributor on a monograph for the Institute of Security Studies (ISS) titled Player and Referee, the 2010 Soccer World Cup Conflict of Interests.
