EXPOSED: TORY'S PLOT WITH RACE THUGS TO FIX ELECTION

DEVIOS: Afzal Amin is captured by secret filming

■ Star Asian candidate planned fake English Defence League demo

■ He promised salary to EDL to win 4,000 voters

■ Party in disarray in key seat as it dumps him at 6pm last night

EXCLUSIVE MOS INVESTIGATION

By Nick Craven and Ben Ellery

A KEY Tory Election candidate was suspended last night after plotting with far-Right extremists to stir up racial hatred in a cynical bid to win votes.

Afzal Amin hatched a scheme to persuade the English Defence League to announce an inflammatory march against a new £18million 'mega-mosque'. But - as he revealed in secretly filmed footage obtained by The Mail on Sunday - the plan was that the demonstration would never actually go ahead. And when the phoney rally was called off, the fiercely ambitious Amin, a Muslim, intended to take credit for defusing the situation - winning over voters, and police, in the marginal Commons seat of Dudley North.

In return for going along with the scheme, the former Army captain promised the EDL members he would be their 'unshakeable ally' who would help bring their extreme views into the mainstream if he was elected to Parliament.

Amin also wanted EDL members to be paid to canvass on his behalf in Dudley - against election law. But
